US company says it has no plans to stop working with 8chan

SAN FRANCISCO - Cloudflare, the San Francisco-based company that provides internet infrastructure services to 8chan that help keep the site online, says it has no plans to stop working with the online message board that has been linked to users who are accused of at least three shootings this year.

The company said it has been in contact with law enforcement about Saturday's mass shooting in El Paso, Texas, where the suspect is believed to have posted a manifesto on 8chan minutes before the attack.

Predictably, Beto O'Rourke fairly sprinted down to his hometown of El Paso to blame Donald Trump for the city's mass murders in the hope of reigniting the Texan's failing presidential campaign. But if you read the gunman's manifesto, you would find the murderer as much in agreement, possibly more so, with Elizabeth Warren and O'Rourke himself than with Trump.

There is no question that the recent shootings in Dayton, Ohio and El Paso, Texas were a tragedy for those affected. As well, these shootings can be seen as nothing less than acts of domestic terrorism (they fit the basic definition of terrorism, and they were domestic at their core). But the El Paso shooting stands out as a hand over-played by the Progressive-Fascist Left, both domestically and internationally.

As usual, the mainstream media is committing sins of omission at a fast and furious rate, pun intended. Even as they paint the societally dysfunctional shooter, Patrick Crusius, as a "white nationalist", they are conveniently leaving out his self-declaration as a neo-Progressive; a self-declaration proven by his own hand in his "manifesto".

Gateway Pundit points out that Crusius was a proponent of both basic universal income and universal healthcare, two goals only valued by the Progressive-Fascist Left:

US company says it has no plans to stop working with 8chan

SAN FRANCISCO - Cloudflare, the San Francisco-based company that provides internet infrastructure services to 8chan that help keep the site online, says it has no plans to stop working with the online message board that has been linked to users who are accused of at least three shootings this year.

The company said it has been in contact with law enforcement about Saturday's mass shooting in El Paso, Texas, where the suspect is believed to have posted a manifesto on 8chan minutes before the attack. People accused of a synagogue shooting in Pittsburgh and shootings at two mosques in New Zealand also reportedly announced their plans on 8chan.

Cloudflare provides cybersecurity and other services to websites that help them to stay online. In 2017, Cloudflare pulled its services from The Daily Stormer, a Neo-Nazi website.

Douglas Kramer, Cloudflare general counsel and a former lawyer in President Obama's White House, told CNN Business on Sunday that the company does not believe it should have the power to unilaterally decide what can and cannot stay on the internet, pointing out that even if Cloudflare stopped working with 8chan it could be possible for the site to still stay online.

The company isn't legally required to provide its services to any website, regardless of content.

Kramer said Cloudflare complies with requests from law enforcement agencies and from courts relating to websites that are involved in child pornography and other illegal activity.

He said Cloudflare would comply with a request relating to 8chan if such a request were made, but the company would "want to see something from law enforcement or a regulator agency or a court that says, 'We have made this decision after going through due process.'"

Kramer said while there are laws, regulations and processes in place for pulling online support services from websites like those used for child pornography, lawmakers and regulators have been less active in creating processes for sites like 8chan.

After the company stopped working with The Daily Stormer in 2017, Cloudflare CEO Matthew Prince questioned his own decision.

"You win a lot of points for firing Nazis from using your service," Prince told CNN at the time. "But it sets a dangerous precedent when a company that most of your viewers have never heard of is effectively deciding what can and cannot be on the internet."

"Without a clear framework as a guide for content regulation, a small number of companies will largely determine what can and cannot be online," Prince wrote in a blog post at the time.

Cloudflare even posted a list of criticisms about its decision to its website.

Cloudflare sees itself as fundamentally different to services like Facebook, Kramer told CNN, because it is not involved in surfacing or moderating content.

"We really don't have anything to do with content," Kramer told CNN, "we see bit bits moving around the internet and we are one of the groups that make sure those bits move safely and securely."

"Facebook sits up at the surface of the internet, forming communities, moderating those communities, figuring out what people want to see next," he said.

"We recognize the tragedy of the two incidents that happened yesterday," Kramer said, adding that Cloudflare was continuing to monitor the situation.

Fredrick Brennan, who created of 8chan, told CNN on Sunday that the site's current administrators "are running it in a way that is indefensible."

"If it's going to keep on like this it should be shut down," he said. "I don't want to pile on but they are not doing anything to solve this. They should at least shut down the board for a week or a month after something like this. They are letting their users incite violence."

Don't know where your 12:14 timestamp is coming from, but apparently not original events data.

(Theory) I have seen this: they are monkeying with Twit Timestamp so that MSM's can screen cap it into their articles. I saw an article that showed 12:03 timestamp.

I think this twitter timestamp and the timestamp on the 8ch manifesto post were huge mistakes in coordinating the sequence of events.

I used this link earlier to show the 10AM timeline and failed to archive it. It now has the altered timeline on it. I let them get away with one. I am learning.

Just some more leftist push on this hateful place..

8chan Is a Normal Part of Mass Shootings Now

8chan isn't only a place where people find community in their hate, but it is where they go when they want to announce mass murder to an online army that can help spread their message. Even when 8chan's owners do feel compelled to step in-in a rarity, the suspected El Paso shooter's original thread appears to have been removed-that army will have already gotten to work. The manifesto has been reposted again and again and again. The playbook worked.

20 Killed, 26 Injured in Texas Mass Shooting, Officials Say
By The Associated Press
August 3, 2019 Updated: August 3, 2019

EL PASO, Texas-Twenty people were killed and more than two dozen injured in a shooting Saturday in a busy shopping area in the Texas border town of El Paso, the state's governor said.

Meanwhile, the police chief said among the possibilities being investigated is whether it was a hate crime. Two law enforcement officials who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity identified the suspect taken into custody as 21-year-old Patrick Crusius of the Dallas area.

Police said another 26 people were injured, most of them being treated at area hospitals. Most of the victims were believed to have been shot at a Walmart near the Cielo Vista Mall, they said, adding that the store was packed with as many as 3,000 people during the busy back-to-school shopping season.

"The scene was a horrific one," said El Paso Police Chief Greg Allen, who added that many of the injured had life-threatening injuries. He said police also had found a manifesto that may have been written by Crusius and posted online-one reason it was being investigated as a hate crime.....

You took some QR dufus' word for it instead of looking at the data.

First of all, the shooting began at around 10AM ET. Look at the timestamp on your 4chan thread OP. HOURS AFTER THE SHOOTING.

Also, look at the archive.is post. It STILL links to the original pdf document, not screenshot images of each page. The 8ch /pol/ post has the shooter's comments about what he's going to do.

The 4chan THREAD OP that you linked to just has screenshotted images of the shooter's original pdf document.

8ch /pol/ was original source of manifesto.
Which we STILL can't verify is from this shooter yet.
