

Mr Googley's Australian Wildlife

COLOUR-IN Safari

"Study these fascinating Australian Native Animals with me, Mr Googley, while you use your pencils, crayons or paints to add a splash of colour!"

Koala. A highly specialised marsupial, restricted to a diet of leaves of certain eucalyptus trees. Seldom drinks. Once common in eastern Australia, is now completely protected. Koala youngsters spend their first few months in a pouch, but soon emerge fully furred, and cling to their mother's back as she clambers about.

Kookaburra.

This large bird laughs at the dawn. Groups of about six to twelve birds are common. The flocks usually comprise a small family. It's a popular bird who will take morsels of food from your hand to complement its diet of small animals and insects.

Pygmy Possum.

Possums come in all shapes and sizes, from Ringtails to Brushtails, Feathertails and Gliders. After sunset, the Pygmy Possum, the tiniest member of the possum family, awakes, and after a time spent grooming, begins to forage for nectar and small insects throughout the night.
