

CLEVELAND ALBUM

At old League Park, E. 66th Street and Lexington Avenue N. E. This photo is undated, but it could have been 1920, the year the Indians won their first World Series.

Spring training hi-jinks at New Orleans in 1911. This photo of players in a tree was probably inspired by former Plain Dealer Photographer Andy Krafft.

The 1910 opening day ceremonies. Dignitaries are Ban Johnson, president of the American League (left); August Herrmann, chairman of the National Baseball Commission; C. W. Somers, vice president of the A. L., and J. F. Kilfoyle, president of the Cleveland Baseball Club.

BEHIND the PICTURES

Pictorial Pictures Inspire Him

A REGULAR READER of Pictorial is Fred P. Martin Sr., 74-year-old retired farmer living south of Lodi in Medina County.

He has two interests—trains and painting in oil. The photo of the Lincoln funeral train locomotive which was used in the Album to your left on Feb. 12 served to combine his two hobbies. Mr. Martin took brush in hand and soon had it on canvas.

NEXT WEEK

Cleveland's beautiful new airport terminal, to be formally dedicated late this month, is the subject of a five-page picture feature—the cover and three inside pages—in full color—next Sunday.

The Cover

NEXT FRIDAY is opening home game day for the Indians, and we just hope the sky is as blue and the day as serene as it is in the cover water color painting by Judy Marmorstein Marken. 15610 Van Aken Boulevard, Shaker Heights.

If it is that kind of a day we're going to find some excuse to join the crowd around the stadium gates, buy a seat and watch the tribe take over Detroit (we hope).
