There were black and bays and durls and greys
 And sorrel horses, eye and mares
 And piebald, too I do declare And more that I do know on.
 There wer blind and lame and wind-galled, too
 Crib-biters there were not a few And roarers more than one or two
 All at the fair at Weyhill

All ages too as I'm alive from one to two to thirty-five
 And some they scarce could lead of drive or on the Down could show 'em
 There were broken-winded too I saw
 And some for panting scarce could draw,
 And there were clickers too I know All at the fair at Weyhill

Now some upon the road were shown and others found upon soft ground
 And up the hill their heads were turned and that's the way to show 'em
 They can gain or lose an inch or two, oh yes, they this, and more can do
 To find the sort that will suit you.
 All at the fair at Weyhill.

The dealers through the fair do splash and swing around a long whiplash
 And say My lads, come stand a-swash, and let's have room to show 'em
 They crack their whips and curse and swear and cry My lads, be of good cheer
 For this my lads is Weyhill fair
 How 'd'ye like the fair at Weyhill
