

Daily Decree “Confidence Among Peers”

_____:

I accept myself just as I am.

I am intelligent, beautiful, successful, and loved right now.

I forgive my peers, and know we all have different paths to follow.

Thank you God for the conviction to follow my own path, be my own person, and live my life in the highest way possible.

I am a good person, good _____, and good friend...thank you.

The approval of myself is more important than the approval from my parents, peers, or friends.

I choose to listen to my heart, to God, and know that this guidance is more precious and more important than someone's opinion of me. I know all I have to do to hear this guidance is take the time to listen, sit, and breathe, and/or simply ask.

Thank you God for who I am.

I..._____ promise to continue to honor the gift that God has already given me...myself.

I remember I am loved, worthy, and approved of already. As I remember this; I let my life be an expression of the worthiness I know within me, instead of a desperate search to find myself.

I release all illusions of perfection, pressure, and proving. I remember I am already everything I need to be.

As I remember the truth of Who I Am, I allow life to be easy, joyful, and stress-free.

I accept myself just as I am.

I am intelligent, beautiful, successful, and loved right now.

Thank you!
