Sharon: I have shared the comments, letters and studies you solicited to the primary authors for their review and recommendation to JACI as letters to the editor. The issue of pay for expert opinion is one that you and any co-signers you might suggest, write to JACI. I can share that this issue has been referred by the BOD of AAAAI for review for inclusion in our existing disclosure statements.

Hi Bruce and Dr. Leung,

So, are you all still intending to run those letters on your website? Was there any discussion among the doctors when this was presented on Tues? I am not really interested so much in "nailing" these doctors for a Conflict of Interest". What I am interested in is having the allergists and immunologists of America trained to recognize, diagnose and treat mycotic diseases.

After all the discrepancies of the new AAAAI Position Statement, noted by many physician and researchers who are actively involved in the research of the matter, are you seeing any indication that the BOD will rethink their acceptance of this doc as their position?

That's all I really want - is state of the art science to be provided to the physicians who are the gatekeepers of treatment of these illnesses.

Am I making any progress? If not, what do I need to do to get there? Will the BOD reconsider their position statement?

Thanks,
Sharon

PS. How many letters did you get? I am only directly responsible for about 10. I am thinking the word must have spread.
